TECHNICAL

Sulfide Stress Cracking --NACE MR0175-2002, MR0175/ISO 15156

Field-based documentation for expanded alloy use requires exposure of a component for sufficient time to demonstrate its resistance to SCC/SSC. Sufficient information on factors that affect SCC/SSC (e.g., stress levels, fluid and gas composition, operating conditions, galvanic coupling, etc.) must be documented.

Codes and Standards

Applicable ASTM, ANSI, ASME and API standards are used along with NACE MR0175/ISO 15156 as they would normally be used for other applications. The NACE MR0175/ISO 15156 requires that all weld procedures be qualified to these same standards. Welders must be familiar with the procedures and capable of making welds which comply.

Certification

Fisher® Certification Form 7508 is worded as follows for NACE MR0175-2002 and MR0175/ISO 15156:

"NACE MR0175/ISO 15156 OR NACE MR0175-2002: This unit meets the metallurgical requirements of NACE MR0175 or ISO 15156 (revision and materials of construction as specified by the customer). Environmental restrictions may apply to wetted parts and/or bolting."
